Mancao arrives under heavy guard

By Jerome Aring and Jeannette S. Andrade

A FORMER POLICE OFFICER who may help unlock some of the mysteries surrounding an 18-year-old double murder case is the most heavily guarded man in the Philippines when he set foot in the country at dawn yesterday.

Not since opposition leader Benigno Aquino Jr. returned home in 1980—to be guarded at an airport greeted by more than 1,000 soldiers—has any returning Filipino been given as tight security as former Senior Supt. Cesar Mancao II received, Inquirer archives showed.

Security officials even sent two Army vehicles to protect Mancao, who has imprisoned opposition Sen. Paolo Lucan in the 2000 killing of publicist Barbara "Bobby" Deora and his driver, Estanislado Gorio. Lucan has denied the allegations. (See "Who Were They?" on Page A6.)

"He has decided to tell what he knows," Justice Secretary Noel Francisco said.

Bro. Eddie: This is only way to jolt RP's No. 1 terrorist

By Nikita Dixon and TJ Burgois

THE FALLOUT FROM the hasty passage of House Resolution No. 1109 continued to be felt yesterday, with been-again Christian leader Bro. Eddie Villanueva threatening to set off "a spiritual earthquake in and out of Malacañang."

At a press conference, Villanueva said he would call his coalition of grassroots-based organizations comprising more than five million members once the House of Representatives convenes itself into a constitutional assembly (Con-ass) to amend the 1987 Constitution and lift term limits on President Manopo-Arroyo and her allies.

"I think that is the only way to jolt the No. 1 terrorist in the country," he said.

Elsewhere, constitutionalists Josepa Iñiguez said that what the administration aims in the House did in passing HR 1109 was to "annihilate" the

CHR slams PNP, AFP low regard for legal processes

By Nikita Dixon

PHILIPPINE SECURITY FORCES appear to have a low regard for legal processes, leading to many unexplained crimes and stalled cases of extrajudicial killings in trial courts, according to Commission on Human Rights (CHR) Chair Lito de Lina.

De Lina made the observation on Wednesday at the 11th session of the United Nations Human Rights Council in Geneva, Switzerland, as part of the CHR's comments on the follow-up report by UN special investigator Philip Alston on the rights situation in the country.

"Despite assurances from the Armed Forces of the Philippines chief of staff and the director general of the Philippine National Police, there has been mixed cooperation from the various units of the uniformed services displaying a low regard for the legal process, which could be another signpost of the culture of impunity within such services," De Lina said.

A copy of the CHR comments presented in Geneva was e-mailed to Manila-based reporters yesterday.

In April last year, Alston released a scathing report practically blaming state security forces for the spate of extrajudicial killings and enforced disappearances of activists and journalists.

His follow-up report issued in April noted that practically none of his recommendations had been followed by President Manopo-Arroyo's administration.

Alston stressed that the government's counterinsurgency campaigns in up to 2008 had resulted in 2,018 deaths, with 1,000 of them as a result of extrajudicial killings.

Alston likewise raised the alarm on the rising cases of unexplained killings of petty criminals entered into by the

IN A WELL-KNOWN BUNGALOW in a well-known BUNGALOW, Ardan Jugueta built for his family in Barangay Beliran in San Miguel, Bulacan, there is a heavy sense of gloom.

The man of the house is still not home, his scheduled return delayed by three days now.

"Until we see his body, I believe he's still alive," said Jugueta's wife, Miguela, 41.

A representative of Air France had called Miguela to confirm that her husband was among the 228 passengers on the plane that crashed into the Atlantic Ocean on May 31.

"He (Air France representative) told me, 'Condoleance.' I said, 'I won't believe he's dead and I have his body.' Bong (Jugueta) is a good swimmer. He might have survived."

Miguela told the Inquirer in a phone interview on Thursday.

Employed at El Bory Shipping Management as a crew member on a vessel in Brazil, Jugueta was on his way home after finishing his three-month contract.

Turning 42 on July 9, Jugueta had been a seaman for 18 years.

Whistle-blower backs up claim

By Jordan R. Uy

THE NAVY WHISTLE-blower on alleged Balakasan fund misuse yesterday produced documents that she said proved her charge military officers took the bulk of money is intended for Filipino troops in the joint military exercise with American forces.

For instance, Navy Ling Nancy Gadian showed receipts she said she reported to show that the U.S. Navy's Gadian-Cable had received over P1 million which never reached the Filipino soldiers under ground.

The money—P8.5 million in total—supposedly was part of a P40-million fund intended for the Filipino troops' participation in joint exercises with American troops in 2000.

Gadian last month said that Gado, then chief of the Western Mindanao Command (WMC), Misamis Occidental (Mind Occidental), and other senior military officers had helped themselves to more than P40 million of the P40-million fund supposedly provided by the U.S.

She said only P2.3 million reached the Filipino troops.

Where's the money?

Gado has repeatedly denied Gadian's allegations, noting that no funds were allocated to him for the exercise.

IN YEARS, Navy Lt. Nancy Gadian told of money that did not reach the troops.

No effort to charge the 20-million expenditure was made by the Western Mindanao Command (WMC), Misamis Occidental (Mind Occidental), and other senior military officers had helped themselves to more than P40 million of the P40-million fund supposedly provided by the U.S.

Gadian said that while from Gado, there were more than 100 other officers—one of them the executive head planner—involved in the irregular disbursement of Balakasan funds. She found no more there, however.

Attempt on life of DOTC exec worries Palace

By J. B. Sison

THE BOTCHED ASSASSINATION of Transportation Secretary Oliver Sison is worrisome, but it's not really a leak to the so-called $128-million National Broadband Network (NBN) deal, Malacañang said yesterday.

"The Palace is condemning such evil activities of these people," Undersecretary Anthony Golea, deputy presidential spokesperson, said in a briefing.

When "blatant," Golea added, was that the attempt on Sison and the previous killings of two government officials were being carried out in broad daylight in public areas.

"This is very alarming because of the fact that we're witnessing high profile killings in broad daylight in the middle of traffic in a congested city," he said.

Five men shot Sison while he was driving along traffic-choked Ortigas Avenue from north to South City Wednesday morning, leaving him in the area and torso, police said.

Sison, head of the Department of Transportation and Communications, held several conferences on the NBN-ETL deal, tentatively at the State Capitol in Manila in 2008.

Golea said it was too early to say the attack on Sison was connected with his conference on the cancelled broadband network deal ahead of an investigation by the Philippine National Police. "We can't make hasty generalizations on these incidents. That's why we need thorough investigations," he said. "We leave this matter to the Philippine National Police."

The PNP has been determined to identify and track down the perpetrators, according to Golea. "The investigation by the PNP is to make sure that incidents won't happen again," he said.

Agencies Undersecretary General Llanes, who had testified on the $128-million deal, said some allegedly secretary Jacobo Bolinao, was shot dead in Taguig City on April 14. Public Works Undersecretary Ramon Aguirre was shot inside the Department of Public Works and Highways office in Manila on March 12. He died eight days later from bullet wounds.

The footnote that has stumped Church officials of Year 100 isn't just to provide the name that some officials gave it. The footnote would be more thought-provoking if it said "For this Island" from "There is No Sunday" which translates as "Sunday's Poem." Some officials think "Reports of the story," or "Secret of Sunday," is more apt.

There are considerable reasons for this. First, the Church is not a monolith. It is a collection of many different groups, each with its own interests and concerns. Second, the Church is not a political organization. It is a religious organization, and its primary concern is the spiritual well-being of its members. Third, the Church is not a social organization. Obama promises 'new beginning' with Islam

CAROL L. RYAN PRESIDENT Barack Obama on Thursday vowed to forge a "new beginning" for Islam and America in a landmark speech to the world's Muslims, ending a vision of peace after a troubling cycle of "misception and discord."

In what may be a defining moment of his presidency, Obama last week set a new blueprint for U.S. Middle East policy, vowing to end violence, forge a peace and a new era of "mutual respect and understanding."

"No longer as one relationship is defined by one dilemma, we will no longer choose who we fear and who we despise," said Obama, who was greeted with a standing ovation as he stepped to the podium at Cairo University's Grand Auditorium to deliver a speech that set a new tone for U.S. foreign policy and ended a cycle of "misception and discord."

Obama said he was not a "Muslim-basher" and that he was not a "Muslim-basher" and that he was not a "Muslim-basher."

Mid the first speech moves. In the university's imposing Grand Auditorium, Obama said the U.S. had with Israel, the source of much Arab distrust of the United States, was not an "enemy," and instead, "partner" with Israel, who they deny the U.S. has.

His breaking from policy of his predecessor George W. Bush, Obama also rebuffed Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's refusal to lead the U.S. back to the Arab world, and instead, to the Arab world.

WASHINGTON—US LAWMAKERS on Wednesday called on the Saudi government to stop distributing children's religious textbooks they said incited hatred and intolerance toward Jews, women and homosexuals.

The request by three Democratic legislators was included with President Barack Obama's visit in Saudi Arabia and Egypt that week to shore up beleaguered US relations with Muslim world leaders.

"This is not some vague demands," Congresswoman Anthony Weiner told reporters. "This is the position of the Saudi government... if we're going to solve the general situation, it's important not to leave any stones."

The Democratic colleagues, Shelley Berkley of Nevada, included the issue. "We hope this will be part of the discussion President Obama has with the Saudi leaders," she said.

Werner has long pushed for legislation forcing the United States to provide a $100-million aid to Saudi Arabia, once calling for the close US ally to be placed on the US list of "state sponsoring states," joining the ranks of Iran, Syria and North Korea.

Calling Obama's visit to the region "an opportunity to turn a new page in US-Muslim relations" in a letter sent to Obama on Wednesday, Weiner asked the president to "urge (Saudi) King Abdullah to eliminate those hateful teachings from the classrooms and to work to improve the country's human rights record."

Other teachings found in a handful of new books smuggled out of the kingdom of Islam with the help of US-based Saudi dissidents that he alerted, the lawmakers said, included "the blood money for a Muslim, and the blood money for a non-Muslim" and "the blood money for a Muslim woman."

Students were also warned in a separate textbook that "the punishment for homosexuality is death," according to Weiner's office.

New York Congressman Joseph Crowley urged Saudi Arabia to bring its efforts to broker Middle East peace to line with its teaching of young people.

"The future, at our risk, the Saudi government is trying to position itself as peace broker and yet at the same time, profiting books and textbooks to young people that incite hatred," he said.

"This type of hate speech has to stop," Weiner said, careful to stress that "this group like this is not the teaching in the Quran. It's not the teaching of Islamic thought. This is an aberration, under the guise of Islamic teachings, to turn hate and to sow division."

Congress has questioned alleged radical teachings in textbooks for Muslim children in the past.

In 2003, a congressionally-appointed panel found that some textbooks used in the Islamic South-Asian region in Pakistan, just before the US-led invasion of Afghanistan, urged students to commit violence and showed animosity toward other religions. AFP

Ads find way out of idiot box, printed page

By Kenneth H. deRosier

AS MARKETING BUSINESSES think about the search for consumer interaction in a bid to level off the recent effects of the economic downturn, many companies are finally taking their advertisements seriously. That's because according to an industry group, cost-of-airing offers a more practical way of knowing (campaigns may be cheaper than advertising placements in television, newspapers, or on the web).

Weak GDP to force more BSP rate cuts

Gov't lulled by inaccurate data, says Moody's

By Michelle Y. Reyes

THE ECONOMY'S ANemic growth in the first quarter, which might pale compared to reports, will likely force the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas to be more aggressive in shifting its key interest rates to help reverse the downturn.

This was according to Moody's Economy.com, the research unit of credit ratings firm Moody's Investors Service, which also said that the BSP still has plenty of tools to ease monetary policy even with last month's 25-basis-point reduction.

The investor's forecasting and leading rate of the BSP was raised to 6.25 and 6.50 percent, respectively, following the recent rate cut, the BSP has placed the total inflation in key policy rates by a total of 175 basis points since December 2008.

"The BSP has plenty of room to move, with continued demand-side inflation pressures, there are more tools to be forthcoming, but lower inflation (of economic data) are likely to influence the BSP's thinking and determine the extent of monetary easing. Certainly they are reluctant to slacken rates, though this is looking increasingly necessary as investment falls as a rapid pace," concluded the analysts, associate economist at Moody's Economy.com, said in an e-mail.

The economist measured in terms of gross domestic product, grew by only 0.4 percent in the first quarter over the year before, the down to 1.8 percent. The growth fell below most expectations, as economists had seen the private sector and government were expecting a showing of at least 2 percent.

Moody's Economy.com said the fact that the actual growth fell way below the government's official forecast of 1.6 to 2.8 percent means that there were flaws in the gathering of economic data.

In a recently released paper, Moody's Economy.com said the BSP and the national government could have been more aggressive in pump-priming the economy if they knew the stimulus efforts they were doing were greatly insufficient to meet the growth target for the first quarter.

"If the government had realized what was happening, the policy response would likely have been more aggressive and the downturn less severe. Action obviously needs to be taken to improve the flow of economic information in the Philippines," it said.

Looking into across the Philippines, last-quarter performance, Moody's Economy.com earlier projected that the country's economy would contract this year.

Prior to the release of the Q1 growth data, the first three months of the year, many financial markets players believed that the BSP's cutting rate was about to end, but Moody's Economy.com said the BSP would be forced to continue with the easing of monetary policy and the threat of a recession.

The main area growth in the first quarter elicited concerns that the Philippines would fall low in neighboring countries that have already plunged into recession.

After the release of the first-quarter GDP the BSP said it was prepared to continue rate-cutting measures, if needed.

Moody's officials stressed at the same time that monetary policy alone was not enough to prevent the country from slipping into recession. They said the national government must make the provision of pump-priming the economy by maintaining the 2009 national budget of P14.4 billion.

Moody's Economy.com agreed that attention on the government's, its highest priority spending in infrastructure and social services, was needed to help up the Philippine economy.

But it believed that the government had limited capacity to increase spending because of concerns against bleeding the budget deficit. Under the first program for 2009, the government is allowing itself to post a budget deficit of P19.2 billion. But observers said the deficit might increase further because of weaker than expected tax collections.

Given a likely follow-up from tax collection, maintaining the expenditure program for the year would mean a deficit higher than the P19.2-billion.

"The budget position is already stretched and it is likely the government will only be able to come up with an additional small stimulus package, which will hopefully be focused on reducing employment, increasing infrastructure and generally stimulus in infrastructure," the analysts said.

ADB funds Asian integration study

AS MORE ASIAN COUNTRIES AGREE THAT

collaboration among themselves was helpful in coping the effects of the global crisis, the Asian Development Bank has decided to finance and speed up efforts to study how the region can accelerate the process of integration.

Proposals have been raised for ADB to more intensify integrating into one body such as what members of the European Union have done, although observers said there are still a lot of hurdles to clear.

"Incentives in Asia and the Pacific are becoming closer and members of regional organizations are the advantages of speaking a common voice to global free trade," the bank's region's lack of effective institutional arrangements for intergovernmental cooperation," the ADB said in a paper released yesterday.

The ADB noted that the European Union has a wide array of formally negotiated aid policies that members and members of regional organizations are the advantages of speaking a common voice to global free trade," the bank's region's lack of effective institutional arrangements for intergovernmental cooperation," the ADB said in a paper released yesterday.

But to accelerate the achievement of stronger collaboration among Asian countries, ADB has allocated $1.1 million for technical assistance focusing on efforts to enhance regional collaboration.

Asian countries have already initiated programs that promote collaboration, such as the formation of Free trade agreements and the Chiang Mai Initiative. ADB said that the developmental lender also said that unlike the European Union, there are no solid rules for governing intergovernmental collaboration among Asian countries.

"The absence of formal rules, procedures, and obligations for members, not to mention agencies overseeing compliance and enforcement, has sometimes created problems. This is especially true when critical cooperation in border clearance or private business—such as security benefits if everyone coordinates to reduce cooperative capital flows. However, with inadequate sharing of information and reluctance to commit, individual governments may decide to diverge from the cooperative capitalization, leaving everyone worse off," the ADB said.

Currently the reluctance of some states to lead initiatives at regional collaboration efforts and the difficulty of some states to adapt proposals of the others are making it difficult for Asia and the Pacific to shape a regional agenda, the ADB said.

The ADB said the study would determine whether there is a need to create an informal regional cooperation integration (RCI) institution, which are proposed to supervise the compliance of member states, thus to reduce integration. Michelle Y. Reyes

THE CHANGE IN THE BUILDING PRICE INDEX for selected building materials in Metro Manila in April showed down to 1.7 percent year-over-year, even as the construction industry remained the highest spot of the economy amid the global crisis.

Data from the National Statistical Office show that the increase in price in April was the lowest in at least 11 months or more August 2008, when a rise of 4.3 percent was recorded.

The basket of goods monitored by the index for construction products includes materials for copper, electrical insulations, masonry, painting materials and related compounds, plumbing, masonry and miscellaneous use.

On a monthly basis, the NBI for construction supplies was down 0.1 percent in April compared to prices in March.

Monthly prices have fluctuated since a construction in February prices against January prices by 0.3 percent, and a rise of 0.6 percent in March.

The lowest month-on-month increase in material prices in the past two years was recorded in June 2007 at 1.3 percent.

Shower board growth rates were over capacity materials at 6.2 percent in April compared to the same month in 2008, from 4.7 percent to January decrease against prices in the same month in the previous year.

The same was observed with electrical materials 14 percent March 9 percent, masonry materials 15.4 percent from 7.8 percent, plumbing materials (2.7 percent from 3 percent), and miscellaneous materials (11.4 percent from 12.1 percent).

By the fact might mean, the construction materials group continued to show lower construction 16.1 percent.

In April, only prices of painting materials and related materials increased, by 7.2 percent from 6.9 percent in March.

Also, monthly growth rates were down due mainly to declines in the prices of electrical materials and miscellaneous construction materials at -1.1 percent and -1.8 percent, from 1 percent and -1.6 percent in March, respectively.

After the successful Pinoy map, Eala goes into pleats

Gearing up for his 20th year in fashion, he joins 'Face Off' with Rajo Laurel and Randy Ortiz

By Chea K. Masid

RHETT EALA MAY NOT have as strong a name recall as his contemporaries, but it's quite likely that the Pinoy on the street has worn his designs—or a knock-off of one, at least.

The very popular graphic site on the Philippine map records this, and T-shirt designs in an Eala design for Collective U—the brand where he's based the creative-director since 2000.

In the early 2000s, he popularized the much-loved, vibrant pinoy, which, in that day, caught up in the strong special occasion motif of many women.

At Eala's progress to mark his 20th year in fashion next year, he will present a collection in the Laguna Lifestyle and Shopping Fashion Show at the Cultural Center of the Philippines on June 21.

Dubbed "Fashion Face Off," it will put his collections alongside those of his contemporaries: Rajo Laurel and Rudy Limson.

which anniversary his 25th year inclusion in retail, this show is for the time contemporary fashion designers are showing in CLO.

The concept of "Fashion Piece 101" built back to the '70s and '80s—considered as the golden age of Philippine fashion—when women's styled back-to-back collars, then allowing the fashion industry and the people to compare their craft and talent, and more evolution.

In "Fashion Piece 101," Eala will show 20 selected dresses that showcase his pleating techniques. Nothing too extravagant, he says, but very elegant.

Market sense

While he has had great success as a costume, Eala's strength seems to be his grasp of what would click in retail. He has "a good sense of what is sellable, perhaps brought on by his background and experience in retail," says designer and trend setter (also, referring to Eala's successful 13-year stint as designer of Banana's in-house women's wear label, Duet, from 1990 to 2001).

"I think his strength lies in his ability to become something and work," Eala adds. "There also has a high level of taste and aesthetic. He's not compromising when it comes to taste and branding."

Eala stepped in Tulle Design as a fashion school in body.

Unlike most Filipino designers who launch their careers in costume, Eala moved to ready-to-wear, gathering its broader reach, even he also enjoyed the privilege of the well-known for the media in order.

"My intention was like that," he says. "I think it's only here when designers do more fun... When you're doing RTW, it's your idea, your design. If you're doing costume, you consider the individual's personality, her taste... You have to compromise a bit."

Resilience

Pitoy Moreno to be named National Artist?

IN ANTICIPATION OF THE National Artist awards, traditionally announced around Independence Day, talk is afoot that President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo will name Jose "Pitoy" Moreno National Artist for Fashion Design.

While the prestigious awards are given often a debate with yet vigorous selection process involving culture officials and experts, the President has the power to name swatches outside of these deliberations.

The deliberations for the 2007 award were:

Aside from Moreno, other names that have been mentioned for the award are Benito Sison, Sabado, Haggan and Pro Indulge.

Each brings his or her lifelong achievement to the awards. The achievements of these designers spanned the 1950s to the present. And depending on a fast-paced process, each deserves the award.

Starting in the 1950s, Moreno has been producing Philippine fashion abroad, before heads of state and royalty from the world figures of the 1950s and '70s, almost all, Moreno had having organized designers and firms. To choose through the decades, he also integrated, since then, these national designers in Philippine culture.

Like Higgins, and known as many, gained national recognition for Philippine fashion early on in the 1950s. She was among the first designers. It was the first, to have integrated the influence of modern culture, particularly French fashion, in Philippine. Most of her time, she opened a fashion school that produced generations of designers, including her students.

Sison is another known for the

The Awards are given to those who have shown excellence in their profession, have contributed to the development of national identity, and have left a lasting impact on their profession and society.

While it is said that it is almost certain that the President will name Moreno for the awards, it's also possible that Fashion Design will not be among the fields to be given an award in 2007. The first and only National Artist Award for Fashion Design was given to Benito Sison in 2006.

PAOLO BEDIONES

THE BOOK OF DAVID: A BETTER YOU? Bediones' intriguing "You Live Every Day" by Joel Osteen symbolizes that part of God's promise is for us to be prosperous and successful. He would never do anything short of "barns in." Sometimes we forget God's promise and think that's the only way. We suddenly think that God has forsaken and forgotten us. We should actually look at us, at our blessings. Bible can help us become stronger, wiser and more resilient. This book also teaches us to be more thankful. When we possess the spirit of gratitude, we are under up to the morning, we can easily appreciate everything that comes our way.

REGINE ANGELES

I USED TO LOVE READING, BUT WHEN I started going to school, I started reading all-day books. I didn't want my mind to stop. I read through a stage of depression and grief. I became more creative. When I got close books, I realized that when I thought and felt were not always true. The book "Cognitive Behavioral Therapy for Depression" by Rob Wilson and Thomas Rasmussen was very helpful. It's actually an easy read. A friend suggested that I read "The Art of War" by Sun Tzu, edited by James Clavell. All of his amazing military strategy, "The Art of War" (by Sun Tzu) was a gift from my cousin. I was in this book that I learned all about the other books that I mentioned. (Bediones' New Design is a Catholic artist's journal.)

A chest of memories

"The Art of War" by Sun Tzu is my favorite. I read it before joining "Sunrise" (Bediones' journal) and other people's promises and blessings have been true to me. I read it every day.
